RecoveryPlanner is a Finalist

“Business Continuity Management Planning Software of the Year”

Business Continuity Awards finalists announced - 2010 Continuity Insurance & Risk (CIR) Awards

Trumbull, CT — May 2009 — RecoveryPlanner, the leader in business continuity, enterprise risk and disaster recovery software and services, announces that it has been named a finalist in the 2010 CIR Business Continuity Awards for Business Continuity Management Planning Software of the Year category (See www.businesscontinuityawards.com for more information).

The award’s criteria for selection includes the following: innovative and original design, done the most for companies of all sizes to improve their continuity management whether servicing the public or private sector, incorporation of best practices within the field of business continuity management, such as BS25999, the ten principles of the BCI, NFPA1600 and other recognized guidelines. Product philosophy and how it can assist business continuity management planning is considered along with customer testimonials.

“Choosing the right BCMP software and provider is a difficult task with many considerations that RP addresses so well. We are delighted to have this third party analysis and recognition of our efforts to offer the most compelling value proposition for BCMP in the world,” said Dan Delventhal, VP, RecoveryPlanner.

Winners will be unveiled on May 12, 2010 at the London Hilton on Park Lane.
